Tyson Chandler Dunks at The Rushmore

By Elise Knutsen 2:32pm

Tyson Chandler finally has a place where he can put his feet up and stretch his legs! The California-born Knicks star is renting a full-floor spread at the Rushmore, the Post reports, and he's sparing no expense on the place: the rental is costing him $32,500 per month.

According to the listing, the residence spans a full 3,600-square-feet. While it doesn't appear to come with a full court, it does have five bedrooms and five baths which could easily be turned into the most impressive Frisbee golf course in NYC.

Along with river and city views, the home has a washer/dryer (no more sweaty jerseys laying around), an eat-in kitchen and a formal dining room.

This makes Mr. Chandler only the latest celeb to move into Gary Barnett's twin towers overlooking the river: Alex Rodriguez and Robin Williams are among the boldface residents to call the Rushmore home. A-Rod actually sold his place for a handsome profit. Perhaps Mr. Chandler should have considered a long-term investment, as well.

The Rushmore. Looks like Chandler and Carmello

Master bath with space aplenty. And views!

This could probably be a court.

Put the hoop right up on that column. Hopefully that's safety glass, just in case.
