Celebrity Homes: Can't knock Tyson Chandler's swanky new rental

You can't expect Tyson Chandler to go small. After all, the Knicks player is over seven feet tall.

Chandler has found a full-floor apartment that accommodates his frame. The tough-guy centre, who played for the NBA champion Dallas Mavericks last season, is renting a five-bedroom, five-plus-bathroom, 3,585-square-foot unit at Manhattan's Rushmore condo building, The New York Post reports.

Apparently, Chandler is "test-driving" the 41-storey Extell Development building; the asking price for his unit is US$32,500 per month. In other Knicks news, rookie guard Iman Shumpert is living in a US$5,000-a-month rental in a luxury condo building in White Plains, N.Y. The 1,400-square, two-bedroom, two-bathroom short-term rental comes with an option to buy.
